Ode of Ends

Ode of Ends

Let it begin that the heathen will pay for their sin
>They claim to feel no remorse, this I feel is coarse
A coarse and false description of intimidation
>One that will no doubt lead them to damnation
Inside their mind they are right, yet Earth exists outside
>They are wrong, they will fall against our Wall
Sweat, tears, and blood is what should
>Reign this world from beginning to end
Or coming from the heavens a messenger to send
>A hymn of destruction, ruin, and demise
That was laid brick by brick by the heathen lies
>This angel is not the last hope of man
This warrior is the final ban
>Of threats made against the Milky Way
One to a million he will slay
>This is merely the beginning
The first score of our winning

>Talley them up and lay them low
For we will give them the last show
>Bullets and fire surrounded by barbed wire
In the line of my sight they will take to flight
>From this planet, because I am hell-bent
For I am the messenger that was sent
>To Earth to act as guardian of all
And I will become the Wall
